PHILADELPHIA, September 3.

UNITED STATES in CONGRESS assembled, Princeton, August 26, 1783.

According to order, General Washington attended, and being introduced by two Members, the President addressed him as follows:

SIR,

CONGRESS feel particular pleasure in seeing your Excellency, and in congratulating you on the success of a war in which you have acted so conspicuous a part.

It has been the singular happiness of the United States, that during a war so long, so dangerous, and so important, Providence has been graciously pleased to preserve the life of a General, who has merited and possessed the uninterrupted confidence and affection of his fellow-citizens. In other nations many have performed services for which they have deserved and received the thanks of the public; but to you, Sir, peculiar praise is due, your services have been essential in acquiring and establishing the freedom and independence of your country; they deserve the grateful acknowledgments of a free and independent nation; those acknowledgments Congress have the satisfaction of expressing to your Excellency.

Hostilities have now ceased, but your country still needs your services; she wishes to avail herself of your talents in forming the arrangements which will be necessary for her in the time of peace; for this reason your attendance at Congress has been requested. A Committee is appointed to confer with your Excellency, and to receive your assistance in preparing and digesting plans relative to those important objects.

To which his EXCELLENCY made the following Reply.

Mr. PRESIDENT,

I AM too sensible of the honorable reception I have now experienced, not to be penetrated with the deepest feelings of gratitude.

Notwithstanding Congress appear to estimate the value of my life beyond any services I have been able to render the United States, yet I must be permitted to consider the wisdom and unanimity of our national councils, the firmness of our citizens, and the patience and bravery of our troops, which have produced so happy a termination of the war, as the most conspicuous effect of the Divine interposition, and the surest presage of our future happiness.

Highly gratified by the favorable sentiments which Congress are pleased to express of my past conduct, and amply rewarded by the confidence and affection of my fellow-citizens, I cannot hesitate to contribute my best endeavours towards the establishment of the national security in whatever manner the sovereign power may think proper to direct, until the ratification of the definitive treaty of peace, or the final evacuation of our country by the British forces; after either of which events I shall ask permission to retire to the peaceful shade of private life.

Perhaps, Sir, no occasion may offer more suitable than the present to express my humble thanks to God, and by grateful acknowledgments to my country, for the great and uniform support I have received in every vicissitude of fortune, and for the many distinguished honors which Congress have been pleased to confer upon me in the course of the war.

STATE of PENNSYLVANIA.

IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY,

MONDAY, AUGUST 25, 1783, A. M.

AGREEABLE to the order of the day, the house went into the consideration of the report on the subject of national credit, read August 22d instant: Whereupon,

Resolved unanimously, That Mr. Rush, Mr. Whitehill and Mr. Hoge, be a Committee to prepare and bring in a bill conformable to the resolution of Congress of April 18, 1783, inserting a clause for repealing the act, intituled "An act to vest in the Congress of the United States a power to levy duties of five per centum ad valorem, on certain goods and merchandize imported into this Commonwealth, and on prizes and prize goods condemned in the Court of Admiralty of this State, after the first day of May, 1781, and for appropriating the same, passed April 5, 1781."

Resolved unanimously, That the measures Congress have taken in their resolution of the 18th of April last, to support and establish public and national credit, meet with the approbation of this House, and they will appropriate substantial and permanent funds, by taxes or otherwise, for supplying the Continental Treasury with their quota, as assigned in said resolution.

Resolved unanimously, That this House do hereby authorise and direct their Delegates in Congress, or any two of them, to join with the Delegates of the other States in Congress assembled, properly authorised, in revoking and making void so much of the 8th article of Confederation and Perpetual Union between the Thirteen States of America, as is contained in the following words, viz. "All charges of war, and all other expences that shall be incurred for the common defence or general welfare, and allowed by the United States in Congress assembled, shall be defrayed out of a common Treasury, which shall be supplied by the several States, in proportion to the value of all lands within each State granted to or surveyed for any person, as such land and the buildings and improvements thereon shall be estimated, according to such mode as the United States in Congress assembled shall from time to time direct and appoint;" and in place thereof, to substitute the words following, viz.

"All charges of war, and all other expences that have been or shall be incurred for the common defence or general welfare, and allowed by the United States in Congress assembled, except so far as shall be otherwise provided for, shall be defrayed out of the common Treasury, which shall be supplied by the several States, in proportion to the whole number of white and other free citizens and inhabitants of every age, sex and condition, including those bound to servitude for a term of years, and three-fifths of all other persons not comprehended in the foregoing description, except Indians not paying taxes in each State; which number shall be triennally taken and transmitted to the United States in Congress assembled, in such mode as they shall direct and appoint."

On motion ordered, That the Committee on ways and means provide funds for raising the sum of 205,189 dollars, in compliance with the second resolution of the report of the Committee on the subject of national credit, adopted this day.

Extract from the Minutes,
PETER Z. LLOYD, Clerk of the General Assembly.

NEW-JERSEY.

At a meeting of the inhabitants of New-Brunswick and its neighbourhood, on Monday, the 4th day of August instant, AZARIAH DUNHAM, Esq; was appointed Chairman, and the following ADDRESS unanimously agreed to, it was ordered to be signed by the Chairman, and presented to Congress, by a Committee chosen for the purpose.

To the UNITED STATES in CONGRESS assembled.

THE inhabitants of New-Brunswick and its vicinity, feel themselves happy in having an opportunity of addressing Congress in the State of New-Jersey, they congratulate your august body on the glorious termination of a war, which had for its object the rights of mankind, and which has established the independence of the United States of America, and has given them a name and a conspicuous station among the nations of the earth; an æra auspicious and eventful indeed. May internal order, harmony and peace pervade each of the States individually, and all of them in their collective and fœderal capacity.

As Congress have it in contemplation to make choice of a place for their permanent residence, the inhabitants of New-Brunswick and its vicinity beg leave to mention the banks of the Raritan, as being not unworthy of their attention in that point of view; they forbear to describe the place, or to enumerate its advantages; the attachment they feel for the spot on which they live, and particularly the passionate desire they have of being honoured with the presence of Congress might, perhaps, lead to a description too flattering and highly wrought, let the place speak for itself; let impartial men declare its beauties, and point out its defects; your addressers wish to be silent upon the occasion: They cannot, however, resist the impulse of truth, and therefore are constrained to say, that, considering themselves as members of the United States at large, and standing upon continental ground, they sincerely wish that Congress may fix upon the most proper place for their residence, and wherever they fix, the inhabitants of New-Brunswick and its vicinity will ever bear the warmest attachment, the most grateful affection, and the highest respect for the supreme head of the union.

Congress may rest assured, that should the Banks of the Raritan be looked upon as eligible ground, its inhabitants will deem it a distinguishing privilege, and a singular felicity to live within their jurisdiction, and under their immediate government.

By Order of the Meeting.

In answer to which his Excellency the President of Congress was pleased to honor the Committee with the following LETTER, containing the sentiments of Congress thereon.

Princeton, August 16, 1783.

IN answer to the very respectful address of the inhabitants of New-Brunswick and its vicinity, which you did me the honor of inclosing to my care, I am directed by Congress to inform those respectable citizens, "That Congress with pleasure received their congratulations on the glorious and happy success of the war---are obliged by the affection and respect for the fœderal government expressed in their address, and highly approve their patriotic disposition to promote order, harmony and peace throughout the United States."

The honor of this communication gives me great pleasure, as it is an additional testimony, to the persevering and worthy conduct of my fellow citizens of New-Jersey.

I have the honor to be,
With the most perfect consideration,
Gentlemen,

Those who wish for farther information will please to apply to Mr. Robert Aitken, Bookseller and Printer, near the Coffee-house; or the Printers hereof, who are furnished with a specimen of the work, and will receive subscriptions.

To the PRINTERS of the PENNSYLVANIA GAZETTE.

GENTLEMEN,

As it muſt give great pleaſure to all true hearted Americans to find that foreigners know and revere the diſtinguiſhing talents and merit of our excellent Commander in Chief, I ſend you the incloſed, that, by inſerting it in your paper, you may inform ſuch of your readers as have not ſeen the Letters of the Abbe Robin, a Chaplain in Count De Rochambeau's army, lately publiſhed in this city, under the title of "New Travels, &c." of the juſt ſentiments that writer entertained of our incomparable General. Your's, &c. I. H.

I HAVE ſeen General WASHINGTON, that moſt ſingular Man---the ſoul and the ſupport of one of the greateſt revolutions that has ever happened, or can happen again. I fixed my eyes upon him with that keen attention, which the ſight of a great man always inſpires.---We naturally entertain a ſecret hope of diſcovering, in the features of ſuch illuſtrious men, ſome traces of the excellent genius which diſtinguiſhes them from and and elevates them above their fellow mortals. Perhaps the exterior of no man was ever better calculated to gratify theſe expectations, than that of General Waſhington: He is of a tall and noble ſtature, well proportioned, a fine, chearful, open countenance, a ſimple and modeſt carriage, and his whole mein has ſomething in it that intereſts the French, the Americans, and even enemies themſelves, in his favour. Placed in a military view, at the head of a nation, where each individual has a ſhare in the ſupreme legiſlative authority, and where the coercive laws are yet in a great degree deſtitute of vigour, where the climate and manners can add but little to their energy, where the ſpirit of party, private intereſt, ſlowneſs, and national indolence ſlacken, ſuſpend and overthrow the beſt concerted meaſures; although ſo ſituated, he has found out a method of keeping his troops in the moſt abſolute ſubordination; making them rivals in praiſing him; fearing him even when he is ſilent, and retaining their full confidence in him, after repulſes and defeats.---His reputation has at length riſen to a moſt brilliant pitch; and he may now exerciſe almoſt unbounded power, without provoking envy, or exciting ſuſpicion. He has ever ſhown himſelf ſuperior to fortune, and in the moſt trying adverſity has diſcovered reſources till then unknown; and, as if his abilities only increaſed and dilated at the proſpect of difficulty, he is never better ſupplied than when he ſeems deſtitute of every thing; nor have his arms ever been ſo fatal to his enemies, as at the very inſtant when they thought they had cruſhed him for ever.-----It is his to excite a ſpirit of heroiſm and enthuſiaſm; to gain over the reſpect and homage of thoſe whoſe intereſt it is to refuſe it; and to execute his plans and projects by means unknown even to thoſe who are the inſtruments; he is intrepid in dangers, yet never ſeeks them but when the good of his country demands it, preferring rather to temporize and act upon the defenſive, becauſe he knows ſuch a mode of conduct beſt ſuits the genius and circumſtances of his nation; and that all he and they have to expect depends upon time, fortitude and patience; he is frugal and ſober in regard to himſelf, but profuſe in the public cauſe:----like Peter the Great, he has by defeats conducted his army to victory; and like Fabius, but with fewer reſources and more difficulty, he has conquered without frequent battles, and ſaved his country.

Such are the ideas that riſe in the mind at the ſight of this great man, in examining the events in which he has had a ſhare, or in liſtening to thoſe whoſe duty obliges them to be near his perſon, and, conſequently, can beſt diſplay his true character.---In all theſe extenſive States, they conſider him in the light of a good angel, diſpenſing peace and happineſs around him.-----The Americans, that cool and ſedate people, who, in the midſt of their moſt trying difficulties, have attended only to the directions and impulſes of plain method and common reaſon, are rouſed, animated and inflamed at the very mention of his name; and the firſt ſongs that ſentiment or gratitude has dictated, have been to celebrate General Waſhington.

It is uncertain how many men his army conſiſts of exactly: Some ſay only four or five thouſand; but this General has always found means to conceal the real number, even from thoſe who compoſe it. Sometimes with a few troops he forms a ſpacious camp, and increaſes the number of tents; at other times, with a great number, he contracts it to a narrow compaſs; then again, by detaching them inſenſibly, the whole camp is nothing more than the mere ſkeleton and ſhadow of an army, while the main body is tranſported to a diſtant part of the country.

General Waſhington has rendered Trenton famous to the lateſt times, by a victory, in which he ſo happily diſcloſed the amazing reſources of his genius.

The Engliſh troops in 1776, being arranged in cantonments, formed a line from Brunſwick, on the Rariton, to the Delaware; fourteen or fifteen hundred men were at Trenton, as many at Bordenton, and a third corps of equal ſtrength at Burlington, which is only twenty miles from Philadelphia. General Waſhington's army, which was every day growing weaker and weaker, leſt the Engliſh in enjoyment of the greateſt ſecurity, and only two nights freezing weather would have enabled them to croſs the Delaware on the ice, and take poſſeſſion of Philadelphia. In this critical ſituation of affairs the Congreſs retired to Baltimore, in Maryland; and America, with dread and conſternation, beheld the fatal moment approaching, when ſhe had reaſon to apprehend her chains were to be rivetted on her for ever.

General Waſhington, not finding himſelf in a ſituation to make head againſt the united force of the enemy, formed a deſign of attacking them ſeparately: In haſte he collected the militia of Pennſylvania, New-Jerſey, &c. and divided the whole into three bodies; two could not paſs the Delaware for ice; but the party under the direction of the General himſelf was more fortunate; for he croſſed the river, and, after a ſmart conflict, took above nine hundred Heſſians priſoners. A ſhort time after, having kindled fires through his camp, and left one man to take care of each, he marched round about, and came upon the rear of the enemy, ſurprized them once more near Princeton, and obliged another conſiderable body to ſurrender their arms.

The Engliſh were then, in their turn, forced to retire, and put themſelves on the defenſive.

BOSTON, Auguſt 14.

After an arduous but ſucceſsful conteſt for the deareſt rights of human nature---A conteſt that has coſt us the beſt blood of our country, and many millions of our treaſure, is there a boſom amongſt us, that pretends to virtue and patriotiſm, that feels not the warmeſt glow of gratitude to Heaven, for that interpoſition, which in the darkeſt hours of our diſtreſs, in a manner little ſhort of miracle, has ſaved us from impending ruin, and conducted us through difficulties which ſeemed altogether inſurmountable, to that envied ſituation in which we now attract the notice of the world. Circumſtanced as we at preſent are, it behoves us to act with the greateſt circumſpection, and be careful that we do not, by giving way to the dictates of paſſion, loſe the great object for which we have been contending, or in the riot of enjoyment, wantonly ſport away a jewel that requires a jealous and aſſiduous care to preſerve. The wealth of our country, and the lives of our fellow-citizens have been ſpent profuſely, but not unprofitably, if they have purchaſed for us a government of wiſe and virtuous laws, a government under which the ſubject may ſit down with ſecurity, and ſay, "If I offend not the laws of my country, who is there that ſhall make me afraid?"

It is now the indiſpenſible duty of every man who has his country's welfare at heart, to contribute all that lies in his power to ſtrengthen thoſe bands of civil fellowſhip, which are intended to promote the proſperity of the community, and by a due obedience to the authority legally eſtabliſhed, increaſe that harmony, without which a civil ſociety cannot long exiſt. Whoever acts in oppoſition to this doctrine, whatever ſpecious pretences he may aſſign for his conduct, and however ardent his zeal may appear, cannot ſeriouſly mean well to his country, or, if he means well, the conſequences of his conduct are counter to his intentions; for death is not more certain as the lot of man, than tyranny as the end of licentiouſneſs.

It is an obſervation which our enemies have frequently made, that our governments would want that energy which is requiſite for the preſervation of order, and the advancement of the true intereſts of the people; they have inſultingly told us that we poſſeſſed not the wiſdom and the virtue to manage our own affairs with reputation, and that we would be plunged in anarchy and confuſion, when left to ourſelves.

And ſhall we, in the moment of their abaſement, and of our final and compleat ſucceſs, afford them the triumph to obſerve that their predictions may be verified? No! let us rather endeavour to convince them, that in this, as in every other political argument, they have embraced error for truth: let us give them one more leſſon, which, tho' the laſt, may not be the leaſt inſtructing, "That the happineſs of mankind depends upon laws which are founded in wiſdom, and executed in juſtice; which protect the ſubject from the inſolent abuſes of power, whether in the many, in the few, or in one.

Laſt Monday arrived the ſloop Deer, Richard Grinnell, Maſter, in 22 days from St. John's Newfoundland, who informs, that American veſſels were not permitted to enter, wear colours, or ſell their cargoes, except ſuch articles as the neceſſities of the garriſon required---that a number of American veſſels were there, waiting the arrival of the Governor, who for ſome time had been expected---and further ſays, that fiſh ſold for 16s. ſterl. per quintal---Capt. Grinnell, on his homeward bound paſſage, put into Halifax, where the troops from Penobſcot had arrived, and the Heſſian troops embark'd---deſtination unknown.

The General Court, in their late Seſſion, ordered a congratulatory Addreſs to be tranſmitted to his Excellency General WASHINGTON, of which the following is a true copy.

SIR,

THE Senate and Houſe of Repreſentatives of the Commonwealth of Maſſachuſetts, in General Court aſſembled, take this opportunity of congratulating you on the happy return of peace.

Your Excellency, we are aſſured, will join us in the warmeſt expreſſions of gratitude to the Supreme Ruler of the Univerſe, under whoſe influence and direction the ſtruggles of a virtuous and free people have terminated in a revolution which excites the admiration of the world.

Guided by his all-wiſe providence, your country early fixed her eyes upon you; and confiding in thoſe eminent qualities which you poſſeſſed, appointed you to the command of her armies.

The wiſdom of your conduct in the diſcharge of that important truſt, has given a compleat ſanction to the appointment, and crowned the moſt heightened expectation. In every ſtage of the arduous conflict, what trying ſcenes have you not paſſed through! What hardſhips have you not endured! What dangers have you not encountered!---May Heaven reward your unremitted exertions!---May you long live, beloved by a grateful country, and partaking largely in the enjoyment of thoſe ineſtimable bleſſings which you have been ſo eminently inſtrumental in ſecuring for us! While Patriots ſhall not ceaſe to applaud that ſacred attachment which you have conſtantly manifeſted to the rights of citizens---too often violated by men in arms! your military virtues and atchievments will be deeply recorded in the breaſts of your countrymen and their poſterity, and make the brighteſt pages in the hiſtory of mankind.

By the UNITED STATES in CONGRESS Aſſembled, Auguſt 7, 1783.

Reſolved unanimouſly, ten ſtates being preſent:

That an equeſtrian ſtatue of general Waſhington be erected at the place where the reſidence of Congreſs ſhall be eſtabliſhed:

Reſolved, That the ſtatue be of bronze: the general to be repreſented in a Roman dreſs, holding a truncheon in his right hand and his head encircled with a laurel wreath: the ſtatue to be ſupported by a marble pedeſtal, on which are to be repreſented, in baſſo relievo the following principal events of the war, in which general Waſhington commanded in perſon, viz. The Evacuation of Boſton—The Capture of the Heſſians at Trenton—The Battle of Princeton—The Action of Monmouth—and the Surrender of York. On the upper part of the front of the pedeſtal to be engraved as follows: "The United States in Congreſs Aſſembled, ordered this ſtatue to be erected in the year of our Lord, 1783, in honor of George Waſhington, the illuſtrious commander in chief of the armies of the United States of America during the war, which vindicated and ſecured their liberty, ſovereignty, and independence."

Reſolved, That a ſtatue conformable to the above plan be executed by the beſt artiſt in Europe, under the ſuperintendance of the miniſter of the United States at the court of Verſailles, and that money to defray the expence of the ſame be furniſhed from the treaſury of the United States.

Reſolved, That the ſecretary of Congreſs tranſmit to the miniſter of the United States at the court of Verſailles, the beſt reſemblance of general Waſhington that can be procured for the purpoſe of having the above ſtatue erected, together with the fitteſt deſcription of the events which are to be the ſubject of the baſſo relievo.

Laſt Thurſday a ſmall party of whigs in Bucks county, having intelligence that Moſes Doane, Levy Doane, his brother, and Abraham Doane, cozen german of the two firſt, all three outlawed for robbery, were in a ruined houſe near the mouth of Tohiccon creek, they went thither armed to take thoſe leaders of a gang of robbers. On approaching them they were called to ſurrender, inſtead of which they took up their fire arms and diſcharged them againſt the party, by which an officer of militia was ſhot through the body. A gun was pointed at another by Moſes Doane, but he cloſing in, ſeized upon the villain, who ſtill reſiſting, was ſhot dead by another of the party. Mean while Levy and Abraham Doane eſcaped by the back door. A perſon poſted behind the houſe fired as they ran off, and one of them fell, but riſing again, got into the thicket which ſurrounded the houſe, and eſcaped.

The diſcovery of theſe wretches was made by their ſending a raſcal, who harboured them in or near the hovel where they were found, to a neighbouring mill to procure flour. The fellow thro' weakneſs, it ſeems, betrayed the ſecret to the miller.

The following is copied, verbatim, from a paper found in Moſes Doane's pocket, after he was killed.

Philadelphia, Auguſt 30, 1783.

To the PUBLIC.

THE ſubſcriber, late Maſter of the Academy at Lancaſter, has removed to this city. Encouraged by many reſpectable citizens, he has opened an Academy for the inſtruction of youth in the Engliſh and French languages, in writing, arithmetic, book-keeping, and the neceſſary branches of practical mathematics.

The honourable teſtimony with which the principal gentlemen at Lancaſter favoured him, will, he hopes, inſpire parents and guardians with a reaſonable confidence that his ſolicitude for the morals and mental improvement of his pupils will give them here the fulleſt ſatisfaction.

He can aſſure the public that the gentleman employed as a teacher of the French language has had a liberal education in one of the Colleges in Paris. Gentlemen, whoſe judgment may be depended upon, ſay that he has the beſt pronounciation of that language, in the grammatical knowledge of which he was early inſtructed. He likewiſe underſtands Engliſh, not only to be well underſtood by his pupils, but to tranſlate with propriety from the one into the other. No public teacher of the French tongue ought to be admitted without theſe qualifications in this country.

The price of tuition for French ſtudents is Forty Shillings per quarter; and by the regulations of the Academy, they have the privilege of being inſtructed in the Engliſh or mathematical ſchools, at ſuch hours as their parents may direct, without additional expence. All other ſtudents pay Thirty Shillings per quarter.

Young ladies or gentlemen, who cannot attend at the public ſchool, may be taught French at their houſes, by applying to the ſubſcriber, at the Academy, now kept at Mr. Kinnear's, the north-weſt corner of Vine and Third-ſtreets.
